The Giants were in a joyful mood when they arrived tonight. While they had the same confident opinion of their ability to wrest the title from the White Sox as they did when they arrived here a week ago for the initial clash, there was none of that cock-sureness which was apparent before last Saturday's game. fore last Saturday's game,

The two defeats handed the Giants in Chicago was apparently the best thing that could have happened to the team. It showed that they were not the invincible team they had been Green gridiron at 2 o'clock. Not much is known of the strength of the Maryland team, but this school turns out an eleven that ranks with the best of the secondary colleges year after year.

Gallaudet has been working hard for over two weeks and in spite of some minor injuries sustained in a practice settle with Maryland team, but their fighting blood was up and when they white-washed the Sox in both games in New York the old spirit of confidence returned.

their credit. The two defeats in New York have not disheartened the players. It has imbued them with a "never say die" spirit. On their own grounds, and with a friendly crowd to edge them on, the White Sox believe they will win the fifth game and thus have an edge on the series.

PLAYS NAVY TODAY

Football teams of the Naval Academy and Maryland State College will lock horns on the gridiron this afternoon at Annapolis.

Although State, coached by Curly Byrd turned out a strong aggregation in 1916, the team this year, it is reported, does not measure up to the calibre of last fall, owing to the fact that the Aggles suffered heavily by graduation that many of the men of the regular squad answered the call to the colors. However, State got away to a good start Saturday when it defeated Delaware, 20 to 6.

Although the Middles are still in a noon at Annapolis. Although the Middles are still in a rather crude state—as Coach Dobie is developing a team largely out of green material—they do not antici-pate much difficulty in taking the measure of State.

Several of the players are on the hospital list, although none has been seriously hurt thus far. However, it is expected they will have a strong combination for the go against the
